

A Level Results Day at the Hundred of Hoo Academy

The Hundred of Hoo Academy pupils, teachers, leaders, governors and parents are, once again, bursting with pride as we celebrate our young people's impressive achievements today. This year has certainly been unprecedented and, at times, filled with uncertainty for our pupils. Despite this, our pupils' results will on the whole be reflective of the hard work, determination and resilience that our students demonstrate on a daily basis at the Academy; they exhibit fortitude in the face of more challenging than ever content in A Level and Vocational courses, and this shouldn't be forgotten just because they were not physically able to demonstrate it in a final examination.

Our young people will now realise their aspirations: enrolling on courses at the University of their choice, undertaking reputable apprenticeships or progressing to their career pathways. Throughout the course of results day, leaders and teachers have been providing expert advice and guidance. As a result of the unprecedented way in which grades were awarded this Summer and the increased number of anomalies, leaders were well-prepared and eager to work alongside pupils to ensure that they had access to the individual support required to go onto destinations that meet their interests, their aspirations and will allow them to lead happy, successful lives in the future.

At the Hundred of Hoo Academy, we strive to transform the life chances of our young people. We are relentless in our pursuit of excellence and these results are reflective of the learning that pupils have undertaken throughout our robust, rich and carefully-constructed curriculum and, of course, of the expertise with which our teachers deliver this curriculum.

Many exceptional achievements were celebrated today by our cohort of year 13 pupils, these include:
